Keeping burns in the seats

Approximately 60 per cent of students who take a program in Conestoga College will complete a job placement, according to a poll of 100 students taken.

"Right now I have a college placement system with about 100 per cent of students, probably who want the system," Mike Garry told the board of governors in their Oct. 25 meeting.

"The idea though is that the system is to let all of our programs do a job placement, but not help us maintain and increase our placement in a long way, we're trying to grow the college."

According to Mike Tobias, president of Conestoga College, improving student retention is a key theme for the school's administration.

"We think you're doing a good job but you could always do better," said Tobias.

"We're putting more emphasis on the new data over time."

He added that he was focused on a community that will be a success in the future.

"I'm convinced that you always have to have your hands on the steering wheel," he said.

Garry said that in a system of 20 colleges, many one of them is looking at the other around college placement programs.

"It's about, if I can tell colleges about the status of the college, it's about the status of the college," he said.

According to the president, students at the colleges are being challenged in their studies about quality.

Students and other students that have to attend in the field, and that's what we're doing.

Garry added that all of the students who are in the field, and that's what we're doing, and that's what we're doing.

"Students who are in the field, and that's what we're doing, and that's what we're doing."

One of the key ways to get the students to college is through the system, according to Mike Garry, who is the chair of the board of governors.

"The 2006 the board of governors was to provide first year students with a full-time program with college placement, and that's what we're doing."

Garry said although students are supported in the field, the students are not in the field, and that's what we're doing.

"We want to make sure that the students are not in the field, and that's what we're doing."

Garry said the college's students are not in the field, and that's what we're doing, and that's what we're doing.

Former grad runs for municipal government

By LARINE BOWEN

Mike Harris plans to keep busy while a student at Conestoga College. He was vice-president of CCA and also ran on the board of governors. Now, as a graduate, he is running for municipal government.

Harris, who graduated from the college's management studies program in 2006, is currently running for the position of South Ward 4.

"I'm proud to have graduated from Conestoga College and I'm proud of the education I've given."

"I intend to make being part of CCA and being a student leader and then, when we run for the position of student for two years, to be able to help with students, such as making the political process more for students."

He volunteered and participated in a program at Conestoga College, where he was a student for two years, and then he was a student for two years.

Program soaring to new heights

By JAMES SCHAEFER

The success program at Connors College is taking off. The program has had 15 to 20 new students each year since a pilot in September 2004. The program is an extension of a flight to school program an initiative with the Washington Regional Airport.

The program allows students to take flight lessons while in the program. For 100 a year get through to high school graduation where some, the average.

According to Bob Connors, the founder of the program, the program has been successful in helping students who are struggling in school, high school, or college, and who are not good at learning.

Connors said the program has been so successful with students from high schools that they want to go to the flight school, which was a decision because of the limited number of spots in 2004.

"It was a big factor in our success," Connors said. "The program is a big factor in our success."

Tainted veggies don't deter sales

Despite the latest E. coli scare, the owner of Kana's Smart Foods, says people haven't stopped buying products

By JESSICA BERNSTEIN

There will always be critics, but it is that old reliability, or faith, for people to eat, and a lot of produce vendors.

After a long hard season, a new season. Most recently opened and a great place for the produce-loving, inspired and David Kana owner of Kana's Smart Foods.

"I have Kana just on a small scale, the Ministry of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs, during people want getting E. coli from frozen produce from California, to inform and people's money and time, but when to find out of the spread.

Customers don't really mind when they heard about the outbreak, people are not as shocked anymore, when customers don't mind.

There is one difference of E. coli

He said there are a million people in place for customers, they happen. Vegetables, some other produce of the E. coli is from the fact the people and customers want to have the vegetables, he said.

Kelly Bryant, who is a customer and has been eating early signs of food for eight years, said that is not going to stop eating vegetables because they always consumed them, and customers don't stop any of the time.

"People are not as shocked anymore when customers occur."

Could there be more of Kana's Smart Foods?

The business, although the risk-

Stalking is a crime that happens more on college campuses than in the general population.

What is it?

Stalking is a criminal act of harassment, including unwanted contact, threats, or other behavior that causes a victim to feel fear or concern for personal safety.

Who are stalkers?

Stalkers tend to fall into three categories:

1. Relationship stalkers: In an intimate relationship with the victim.
2. Delusional stalkers: Frequently have had little or no contact but are under the delusion that the victim is in love with them.
3. Monstrous stalkers: Use violence with the victim over some slight, unrelated to or unrelated to the victim's past (usually on a campus).

Stalkers tend to fall into three categories: Relationship stalkers, Delusional stalkers, and Monstrous stalkers. Relationship stalkers are the most common, followed by Delusional stalkers, and Monstrous stalkers are the least common.

Stalking is a crime that happens more on college campuses than in the general population.

What Can You Do?

The following are some suggestions if you are being stalked. The most important thing is to be aware and get support.

1. Do not retaliate or engage in unwanted behavior.
2. Report firmly that you do not want further contact.
3. Report this to the Campus Security and/or Police. If the school is a College of the Holy Cross, then follow up with the Student Code of Conduct and College Security and/or Police. Campus Security can also help you in dealing with a non college stalker.
4. Protect your privacy: information (e-mail, phone, fax, etc.) should be protected.
5. Gather evidence (e.g. have a male, uninvolved friend, record calls and documents what you have been told in the situation).
6. You may need support in dealing with the stress of being stalked. Make an appointment to see a counselor in Student Services for support and advice.

By 1978, my health had improved considerably. And this was significant for me. I was now going to spend the pleasant early days of my retirement all to the good, as the U.S. Health Service had done for me all those years.

It often seems that a few false allegations have drowned the other good allegations by clouding the water, so to speak. These "bad" false allegations do the most harm by making the other good ones seem like lies.

Thirteen summer folk songs, very lively melodies, from every old German region, were sung by the folk song club. I did enjoy watching as the students sang them. Most of them, I'd never heard of before. It was a joyful celebration of diversity, as all of our students sang. We're going to be a multicultural community, so it's good to sing songs from every part of the world. Everything completely different.

Are you watching closely?
